Dear FCC, Both XM and Sirius provide local and nationwide listeners the freedom to be entertained to uninterrupted music and news. I believe the NAB's attempt to ban both of these corporations from local broadcasting is an infringement upon their respective rights as a large corporation. The NAB's claim to have these corporations limited to national broadcasts only is an obvious act of jealousy. The NAB wishes to hold onto its local listeners without the fear of losing them to satellite radio. As a subscriber to XM satellite radio, I feel that the jealous and selfish act is only a way to make the local stations more profitable and impede the success of these radio satellite corporations.

Concerning the fears of these corporations becoming too large, it is understood in our constitution that everyone in this nation has the opportunity and benefit of earning a living. Whether or not these two corporations are succeeding tremendously, I believe that it is up to the subscriber, the local listener, to decide whether or not they want to pay for satellite radio, not the FCC or NAB.
